The Sting of a Bee.

An eastern fable tells of a potentate who demanded that there should be brought to him the stings of a thousand bees killed because one of their colony had dared commit the crime of stinging the hand of royalty. When they were brought in a tiny golden thimble the king was so amazed to find that a thousand of the hypodermic points made such a little mass that he issued a manifesto to the effect that thereafter no person within the bounds of the kingdom should complain at the sting of a bee. The lesson of the fable is that petty annoyances hurt because they are exaggerated in the mind; that when they are seen in their actual proportions they are so slight as to merit only contempt. How much comfort would come to the majority of persons if they could but see the tiny size of the bee stings that lead them to acts of petulance, words of anger, expressions of reproach. The bee stings annoyances have caused lifelong breaches of friendship. They have broken up families and caused anger and resentment to take the place of love and fealty.—Baltimore American.

The Mississippi of Streets.

A street is like a river, with its human current carrying all manner of drift between its banks of residences or shops on either side. And if this simile be appropriate then New York's Broadway is the Mississippi of streets. Probably no other avenue in the world presents so many contrasts in the flow and jettison it carries from Harlem to the Battery. Every type of humanity—uprooted saplings from farms and orchards, proud bullies, craft in silks and satins—may be described in the surging mass. Banker and boot-black, the swaggering swell and the dragged derelict, walk shoulder to shoulder—rush, rather, for Broadway is a maelstrom, the embodiment of New York's bustle and hurry, the place where nothing can stand still. Richard Harding Davis once said that everybody "seems to be trying to reach the bank to have a check cashed before 3 o'clock."—George Seibel in Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

Queer Collateral.

"Here is a fact as strange as it is true," said an Egyptologist. "Mummies in ancient Egypt were used chiefly as collateral." "When an Egyptian wanted to borrow he gave his father's or grandfather's mummy as security. Some-times, if he required a large sum, he gave his father and both grandfathers, and he would even throw in the mummy of his mother-in-law if she fortunately happened to be in a mummified state.

"Joking aside," the Egyptologist continued, "what I tell you is the truth. An Egyptian was not permitted to borrow without pledging the mummy of some near relative. It was deemed in Egypt both impious and infamous not to redeem so sacred a pledge as that, and he who died with a family mummy still in pawn was himself buried in unconsecrated ground."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Postage Stamp.

Consider the postage stamp. It says nothing regarding the difficulty of the task assigned to it, but by dint of close application it usually gets there; also it delivers the goods.

Again, if one isn't enough to carry the thing through, two or more by working harmoniously together see the thing to a finish.

No matter if the mail matter be weighty, it puts a good face of Washington on it and goes directly to the post. It gets licked and stamped upon, and men besmirch its fair features and oftentimes give it more to carry than the postal union allows. But, in spite of all this, it sticks unflinchingly to the matter in hand by virtue of the fact that it knows that it has good backing.

Its stick-to-it-ivity is worthy of emulation by you.—Judge's Library.

Water Colors.

Water color painting was gradually raised from the hard, dry style of the eighteenth century to its present brilliancy by the efforts of Nicholson, Copley, Sanley and others. The Water Color society's exhibitions began in 1805 and may be said to mark the real beginning of modern water color painting. The great master, if not creator, of the art was the celebrated Turner, of whom we read so much in the works of John Ruskin. Exchange.

How Old They Were.

"I see you employ a number of old men."

"I do."

"How old are they?"

"Too old to be interested in canoeing or mandolins or race horses or girls or tennis. That makes them fine for work."—Washington Herald.

Rather.

The subjoined item appeared in a French newspaper:

"There was found in the river this morning the body of a soldier cut to pieces and sewed up in a sack. The circumstances seem to preclude any suspicion of suicide."

Customs and Habits.

Our customs and habits are like the ruts in roads. The wheels of life are tied into them, and we jog along through the mire because it is too much trouble to get out of them.

Why She Didn't.

New Employer But why did you leave your last mistress? New Maid—Hivens! Did you expect me to bring her along with me?—Cleveland Leader.

A Bridge Fight

It Broke an Engagement.

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

It stretched across the salt marsh and connected two villages. Harbor-head folk called it "the red bridge," while Portside people grimly referred to it as "the white bridge." As a matter of fact, it had never been painted at all, and now, after two years' ex-posure to wind and weather, the new wood had taken on soft gray tints that blended with the silver tide that ebbed and flowed between the piles.

Although Harborhead and Portside were connected by the new bridge and the vehicles of both villages rumbled to and fro over the planks, the inhabitants were widely separated by a growing bitterness.

Parson Lane of Portside had pounded the pulp vigorously over the matter. "Pots of paint! Pots of paint!"

he exclaimed one memorable Sunday:

"Have my people drowned their souls in pots of paint? The good Lord made it possible for these villages to be united

by a beautiful bridge, and you wangle over the painting of it as if the color mattered! Brethren, see that your souls are as white as you would have the bridge painted. Let not the red smirch of anger sully its purity!"

After that sermon the bitterness was intensified. The Harborhead people who weekly crossed the bridge to attend Parson Lane's church flattered homeward to spread the good man's words far and wide with most unhappy results.

Noah Wade and Almira Turner were to be married in June. Three times a week Noah crossed the bridge to Harborhead to see his sweetheart. They had never discussed the bridge matter because they had been too happy to talk about anything except their own wonderful affairs.

The Tuesday after Parson Lane's sermon Almira waited at the front gate for Noah. She could see him stepping quickly across the bridge, tall, erect, with his head poised high.

All the Wades were proud. The girl's blue eyes did not soften at her lover's approach. A new expression came into them.

"Waiting for me?" smiled Noah, taking the hat from his brown hair and covering Almira's little hand with his own sunburned fingers.

She drew her hand quietly from beneath his touch. "Yes," she said gravely. "Come with me, Noah: I have something to say to you. Let us go to the orchard."

"What is the matter? Are you in trouble? Has anything happened?"

demanded Noah anxiously, falling into step beside her.

Almira shook her head. In silence they went across the grass to the orchard and paused in the shade of the gnarled old apple trees.

"What is the matter, Almira?" repeated Noah at last.

"I can't marry you, Noah," replied

Almira quietly.

"Why not?" Noah spoke gruffly.

He was angry at Almira's strange manner, at the coldness in her voice and her sudden aloofness.

She looked at the distant sails with steady eyes. "Father says I shan't marry any one from over 'the white bridge,' and I don't know that I want to."

"Personally I don't care a rap what color the bridge is," retorted Noah.

"I've crossed it for two years to see you, Almira, and now at this late day you suddenly drop me and say it's because I live over the bridge—a flimsy excuse. Why don't you say outright that you don't care for me and never did?" His face was growing whiter, and the hand pressed against the tree trunk was clinched until the knuckles were livid.

Suddenly Noah swung away from the tree and without one backward glance tramped across the grass, leaped the fence into a winding lane and disappeared along the shore road.

After that it became known that Almira's wedding garments were carefully laid away out of sight, and Noah

no longer crossed the bridge

three times

One Phase of Self-Neglect.

As the success of our schools and the patronage accorded educational institutions goes to show there is little or no effort now days to deny the necessity of giving our young people broad and enlightened courses of study. The present generation is being benefited by the realization of the elders that much embarrassment is saved through association and contact with learning and the learned. Despite the tendency, even among the most ignorant, to improve their offspring there is frequent illustration of the lack of interest or understanding in the world's work which is almost incredible. For instance, not long ago a young girl graduate of a grammar school and business college entered a room and seeing "Paradise Lost" on the table inquired if it were a spicy story and anything like "Three Weeks." Most of our High School students know Milton's masterpiece, and many who never saw a High School might quote stanzas from it, but the individual quality of mind and the fibre of ambition must be cultivated or the inexcusable "break" is bound to come out. We are all prone to mistakes and are not expected to be up in everything, but on the part of some the utter disregard of the general and to-be-expected knowledge is woeful. Another evidence of humiliation due to ignorance occurred recently when a lady gazed long and wonderingly at a beautiful picture and said: "Who is that?" Upon being told that it was the "Sistine Madonna," she said: "She don't live here, does she?" Another similar break was made by a young man who laughed and ridiculed a bust of Pan and followed up his jocular attitude by asking who the old mutt was, any way.

These breaks are common despite our enlightened age, our proximity to art centers, our clubs, our schools, our books, magazines and newspapers. The fault undoubtedly lies with the individual, so if there is one in a family who is prone to self-neglect along these lines he should be constantly prodded to activity and not allowed to indulge himself in lethargy and sink into the mire of illiteracy.

STATISTICS on suicides and violent death show that automobiles do not cause anything like the proportion of deaths accredited them. Aviation does not seem to figure yet, but statistics on aerial pastime will rise as the bird men continue to fall.

Looking After the Roads and Bridges.

Supervisor Blair Hart made a trip through the valley Thursday looking over the roads and bridges of the Sonoma and Glen Ellen road districts.

Mark Twain as "Attraction." A girl who was a stranger to Mark Twain once found her way into his Bermuda home with the hope of getting a sight of the author. She came suddenly in contact with him and frankly explained her errand.

"Have you seen the crystal cave yet," he asked, "or the aquarium?" "No, I came to see you first," she answered.

"Well, you shouldn't have seen me first," he answered. "I run in opposition to the crystal and the aquarium. But they're not shucks to me. I'm lots better. I give them their money's worth. But you should see them. Then you'll appreciate me."

This was said in his most earnest drawl and with only a sparkle of humor in his keen blue eyes—Chicago Tribune.

ADS. PEROXIDE CREAM

For those particular people who desire a beautiful complexion and who want to keep the skin at its best all the time—keep it clear, flexible, smooth and give it the glow of health—there is nothing as good as A. D. S. Peroxide Cream, because it contains a small quantity of Hydrogen Peroxide, the great antiseptic healing and cleansing agent. Its action upon a red, blotched, pimply, scaly, unsightly skin is very pronounced.

When used as a massage it has a tendency to eradicate wrinkles and to nourish the tissues. It is a mild bleach—perfectly harmless and will not grow hair.

This is one of the leading preparations made by the American Druggists Syndicate, which is composed of 12,000 responsible druggists, and it is but one of the famous A. D. S. Peroxide Family.

The others—equally as good, equally as beneficial and just as popular—are A. D. S. Peroxide Tooth Powder, which whitens, cleanses and preserves the teeth; A. D. S. Peroxide Tooth Paste for the same purpose, put up in a different form; A. D. S. Peroxide Soap, a very superior soap because it cleanses as well as cleanses; A. D. S. Peroxide Foot Powder, for tired, aching, burning feet, and last, but by no means least important, is A. D. S. Peroxide of Hydrogen, the great disinfectant and germicide now being used in so many homes.

All of these A. D. S. preparations can be obtained at any A. D. S. drug store.
